Honors Sociology focuses on "The Ethnography of Everyday Life" in a special seminar-like setting. Ethnography is an exciting form of research based upon first-hand participation and observation of human groups in order to discover cultural meanings of social life. Class participants will critically analyze classic and contemporary sociological texts, documentary films, and - perhaps most important - everyday life. Students will also design, conduct, and present an ethnographic research project on a topic of their choice. The primary mode of evaluation is written work and students will participate in class discussions, presentations, assignments, activities, and field trips.

SOC 2 Contemporary Social Problems

Examines major social problems and alternative solutions.
