CABRILLO COLLEGE MEN’S BASKETBALL PREVIEW

It’s a magic number for Cabrillo men, who are making a living from behind the arc

By STEVE MACHAT

If the 3-pointers keep falling for the Cabrillo Vulcans men’s basketball team, the Seahawks could be in for a special season.

Cabrillo is off to a 3-1 start after winning through the John Mclaughlin Memorial Tournament at Oliva in on-campus facilities. The Seahawks are shooting 40 percent from long range, with 60 3-pointers per game as they’ve opened the season absolutely on fire from beyond the arc.

Cabrillo is shooting 9 percent from 3-point range and has already scored 60 3-pointers this season. In last season’s Western State Conference, Cabrillo averaged just 24 3-pointers per game and converted 29 percent of those shots.

Cabrillo, a member of the National Conference of Community College Athletics (NCCCAA), Division I, which averaged about 15 3-pointers per game, was tied for second in the conference in 3-pointers made per game.

“The Seahawks are doing it without Jovon Knderer,” a transfer from University of Oregon and a former MVP, who missed the first two games of the season due to injury. Despite the loss of Knderer, the Seahawks are shooting 40 percent from beyond the arc. The Seahawks are averaged 40 percent from the field and 36 percent from behind the arc.

“Our stabs over the first three games — I don’t know if you’d believe them.”
