OPENING THIS WEEKEND

‘ESCAPING QUEENS’

Let’s hope the scars from where you’ve been kicking yourself for not catching Joe Ortiz’s ‘Escaping Queens’ last summer are healed. Because the good news is that Cabrillo Stage is bringing back the nostalgic musical after a hit premiere season in 2012. The new production features an all-new cast – so if you were smart enough to see it last year, you have an excuse to check it out again – to tell the story through song of one exuberant but troubled family in 1950s New York. The fabulous play opens tonight and runs through Aug. 18 at the Crocker Black Box theater on the campus of Cabrillo College. Details: www.cabrillostage.com.
