Cabrillo’s Brian King gets warm send off at Apotos breakfast

By ROSEANN HERNANDEZ

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama hosted a farewell ceremony for former Interior Secretary Ken Salazar, who is leaving the Obama Administration at the end of the year after more than six years in the post. The ceremony was held at the White House on Thursday, January 17, 2013.

Salazar, 64, announced his resignation last month, saying he would serve as an elder in the Unitarian Universalist Church in Montclair, New Jersey. He is also a member of the California Conference of Unitarian Universalists.

Salazar served as Interior Secretary from 2009 to 2013, overseeing the Department of the Interior, which is responsible for managing the nation’s natural resources and public lands.

During his tenure, Salazar was a strong advocate for renewable energy and conservation efforts, including the development of wind farms and solar power projects. He also worked to protect public lands from overdevelopment and to implement policies to reduce the nation’s dependence on fossil fuels.

Salazar was born in Las Vegas, Nevada, and grew up in Los Angeles. He earned a degree in geology from the University of California, Santa Barbara, and later earned a law degree from Harvard University.

He served as a Democratic member of the California State Assembly from 1987 to 1994, and later served as the state’s Environmental Protection Agency Director.

Salazar is married to his high school sweetheart, Janice, and they have three children: Daughters Elena and Alyssa, and Son, Ben. He also has three grandchildren: daughters Aileah and Liz and son, Alex.

A key aspect of Salazar’s tenure was his efforts to address the nation’s energy and environmental challenges, and he was instrumental in the development of the country’s first national renewable energy plan.

Salazar is succeeded at Interior by Ken Salazar, who was sworn in as Interior Secretary on Thursday.

Salazar is a former member of Congress and a former Interior Secretary. He served as Interior Secretary from 2009 to 2013.

The Department of Interior is responsible for managing the nation’s natural resources, including public lands, wildlife, and waterways.

Salazar was a strong advocate for renewable energy and conservation efforts during his tenure. He oversaw the development of wind farms and solar power projects, and worked to protect public lands from overdevelopment.

Salazar was born in Las Vegas, Nevada, and grew up in Los Angeles. He earned a degree in geology from the University of California, Santa Barbara, and later earned a law degree from Harvard University.

He served as a Democratic member of the California State Assembly from 1987 to 1994, and later served as the state’s Environmental Protection Agency Director.

Salazar is married to his high school sweetheart, Janice, and they have three children: Daughters Elena and Alyssa, and Son, Ben. He also has three grandchildren: daughters Aileah and Liz and son, Alex.

Salazar is succeeded at Interior by Ken Salazar, who was sworn in as Interior Secretary on Thursday.

The Department of Interior is responsible for managing the nation’s natural resources, including public lands, wildlife, and waterways.

Salazar served as Interior Secretary from 2009 to 2013, and oversaw the development of wind farms and solar power projects. He also worked to protect public lands from overdevelopment.

Salazar was born in Las Vegas, Nevada, and grew up in Los Angeles. He earned a degree in geology from the University of California, Santa Barbara, and later earned a law degree from Harvard University.

He served as a Democratic member of the California State Assembly from 1987 to 1994, and later served as the state’s Environmental Protection Agency Director.

Salazar is married to his high school sweetheart, Janice, and they have three children: Daughters Elena and Alyssa, and Son, Ben. He also has three grandchildren: daughters Aileah and Liz and son, Alex.

Salazar is succeeded at Interior by Ken Salazar, who was sworn in as Interior Secretary on Thursday.

The Department of Interior is responsible for managing the nation’s natural resources, including public lands, wildlife, and waterways.

Salazar served as Interior Secretary from 2009 to 2013, and oversaw the development of wind farms and solar power projects. He also worked to protect public lands from overdevelopment.

Salazar was born in Las Vegas, Nevada, and grew up in Los Angeles. He earned a degree in geology from the University of California, Santa Barbara, and later earned a law degree from Harvard University.

He served as a Democratic member of the California State Assembly from 1987 to 1994, and later served as the state’s Environmental Protection Agency Director.

Salazar is married to his high school sweetheart, Janice, and they have three children: Daughters Elena and Alyssa, and Son, Ben. He also has three grandchildren: daughters Aileah and Liz and son, Alex.

Salazar is succeeded at Interior by Ken Salazar, who was sworn in as Interior Secretary on Thursday.

The Department of Interior is responsible for managing the nation’s natural resources, including public lands, wildlife, and waterways.

Salazar served as Interior Secretary from 2009 to 2013, and oversaw the development of wind farms and solar power projects. He also worked to protect public lands from overdevelopment.

Salazar was born in Las Vegas, Nevada, and grew up in Los Angeles. He earned a degree in geology from the University of California, Santa Barbara, and later earned a law degree from Harvard University.

He served as a Democratic member of the California State Assembly from 1987 to 1994, and later served as the state’s Environmental Protection Agency Director.

Salazar is married to his high school sweetheart, Janice, and they have three children: Daughters Elena and Alyssa, and Son, Ben. He also has three grandchildren: daughters Aileah and Liz and son, Alex.

Salazar is succeeded at Interior by Ken Salazar, who was sworn in as Interior Secretary on Thursday.

The Department of Interior is responsible for managing the nation’s natural resources, including public lands, wildlife, and waterways.

Salazar served as Interior Secretary from 2009 to 2013, and oversaw the development of wind farms and solar power projects. He also worked to protect public lands from overdevelopment.

Salazar was born in Las Vegas, Nevada, and grew up in Los Angeles. He earned a degree in geology from the University of California, Santa Barbara, and later earned a law degree from Harvard University.

He served as a Democratic member of the California State Assembly from 1987 to 1994, and later served as the state’s Environmental Protection Agency Director.

Salazar is married to his high school sweetheart, Janice, and they have three children: Daughters Elena and Alyssa, and Son, Ben. He also has three grandchildren: daughters Aileah and Liz and son, Alex.

Salazar is succeeded at Interior by Ken Salazar, who was sworn in as Interior Secretary on Thursday.

The Department of Interior is responsible for managing the nation’s natural resources, including public lands, wildlife, and waterways.

Salazar served as Interior Secretary from 2009 to 2013, and oversaw the development of wind farms and solar power projects. He also worked to protect public lands from overdevelopment.

Salazar was born in Las Vegas, Nevada, and grew up in Los Angeles. He earned a degree in geology from the University of California, Santa Barbara, and later earned a law degree from Harvard University.

He served as a Democratic member of the California State Assembly from 1987 to 1994, and later served as the state’s Environmental Protection Agency Director.

Salazar is married to his high school sweetheart, Janice, and they have three children: Daughters Elena and Alyssa, and Son, Ben. He also has three grandchildren: daughters Aileah and Liz and son, Alex.

Salazar is succeeded at Interior by Ken Salazar, who was sworn in as Interior Secretary on Thursday.

The Department of Interior is responsible for managing the nation’s natural resources, including public lands, wildlife, and waterways.

Salazar served as Interior Secretary from 2009 to 2013, and oversaw the development of wind farms and solar power projects. He also worked to protect public lands from overdevelopment.

Salazar was born in Las Vegas, Nevada, and grew up in Los Angeles. He earned a degree in geology from the University of California, Santa Barbara, and later earned a law degree from Harvard University.

He served as a Democratic member of the California State Assembly from 1987 to 1994, and later served as the state’s Environmental Protection Agency Director.

Salazar is married to his high school sweetheart, Janice, and they have three children: Daughters Elena and Alyssa, and Son, Ben. He also has three grandchildren: daughters Aileah and Liz and son, Alex.

Salazar is su...